

What Others Have Said About Jewels Workbooks

Many have been touched by and changed through Jewels workbook-based support groups. Sharing enriches the soul and promotes healing. If you have found healing in a group, please email your experience to Sherrie so we may share it with others.

“Your workbook has allowed us to broach the subject with each other with less trepidation and more openness. I would like to be a part of the support group so that our family can find different ways to help each other understand what needs need to be met. I love you already for all you do. With sincere gratitude.”

I can not say enough wonderful things about both the 'Beauty for Ashes' and 'Twenty Things Adopted Kids Wish Their Adopted Parents Knew' Workbooks. I used both of these Workbooks in my discussion groups as well as for me personally. I just wished my adopted parents and I had these tools as I was growing up. It would have made all the difference in the world to me and my parents. We would all have had an understanding of my issues and the hurts that come from being adopted and been able to have practical answers to help us all through those very tough years, I and they had, with me. It would have saved us so much heartache and difficult times.

The Twenty Things Adopted Kids Wish Their Adopted Parents Knew addressed issues I thought were only mine. It also addressed issues I had and didn't realize. It gave me answers as to why I felt and acted like I did. The Workbook also caused me to open up to unexplored areas of my life. With the Scriptures and the questions in that book, so much healing and freedom came into my life. God used this as a tool for healing and understanding.

The Workbook, Beauty for Ashes really gave me a deeper insight to my adopted parents as well as my birthmother and family. It was quite an eye-opener to realize the hurts and difficulty they both faced. This workbook deals with the Triad Adoption and is very insightful to how adoption affects everyone. The questions opened up areas of adoption issues that never occurred to me and was most helpful in healing and giving me a heart for both my birthmother and adopted parents. I appreciated the Scripture that went with each section and how it ministered to my heart.

I would recommend both of these workbooks for anyone that is considering adoption or has been touched, in any way, by adoption.

As an adoptive mother of two girls, the Jewel's materials and interaction with individuals representing each of the adoption triad gave me insight into issues my daughters may encounter as they grow and develop.

It was helpful to have adult adoptee perspectives and recommendations on how to approach significant issues. I also have created a list of key Bible verses to address the identified issues my daughters may have to deal with.

Having specific truth as a foundation will help us as we walk through our life journey together. Hopefully I can be more effective as a mother as well!"

Last night when I saw an old friend, she seemed troubled. She said her husband's brother who had adopted 2 boys had been having problems. I exclaimed, "Wow, have I something for you!" I grabbed my keys and went out to my trunk. I had ordered all of your books to send to my sister who is adopting two young brothers, 4 and 5. I had purchased these and had not yet gotten them sent out.

I brought them in and handed them to my friend. She went through them and in tears couldn't thank me enough. She will be giving them to her other son and contacting your organization to get on the mailing list and for any additional materials. God works in mysterious ways!
